Over The Hills

J.R. Trumbull

Quote: "The journey continues and I move forward with my eyes open and my head held high. The road is long, but far more pleasant when shared with friends."

unknown
Friendship is an important part of life. I have friends I've known all of my life. There are friends I have made along the way whether in person or via the internet. Two very special friends have since passed on. I miss both of them very much. The poem this week is about one of them but much of what it says could apply to both.

There is a rare breed of people who give their all. They keep their word. They put themselves last for those they care about. These individuals often do not receive the same compassion and effort in return yet they continue to give freely of themselves and their resources. These people are true friends. Please Friends, don't let this wicked world change who you are!

FRIENDS

Friends are special people,
Some given only for a time,
The length of days and memories
Are treasures most sublime.

Some are even more special
From the adventures you have shared
And losing them in earthly life –
You're just never quite prepared.

We maybe didn't always agree
But stood there for each other.
In many ways we were closer
Than a sister or a brother.

Visits, concerns, prayer requests,
Discussions of different venue.
What do you think of this or that?
Give me your perspective – can you?

I'll miss the quiet visits
Over coffee with the cats.
Please tell those gone on before
That I'm coming, that's a fact.

Blast From The Past

Nebraska Coal

CIRCA 1920

Jacque Trumbull submits this week's "Blast From The Past" and writes, "This is my maternal granddad, Claude Lattin, with a load of 'Nebraska Coal.' The picture was taken circa 1920 on his homestead on the Calamus River. Claude and his family moved to Stapleton in 1921. One reason they chose to stay was because of the beautiful park and friendly people. I posted this picture on Facebook and had one online friend say that she didn't know we had coal in Nebraska. I had to explain cow chips and their varied uses to her. Yes, she was raised in town."
